An Agent Investigating the Many Advantages Here For Such Concern.

Albert Dorris, representing the Vitagraph company, one of the largest moving picture manufacturing firms in the world, is in El Paso today looking over the situation with a view to making reports to his company on the facilities hereabouts for making moving picture films. Should his report be sufficiently attractive to the management, a company would be brought here for permanent location, and a studio would be established. It would mean the bringing of from 30 to 50 people here as permanent residents, and many more as employees in the market and the giving of employment to from 50 to 100 people locally for the big production of the number of local people to be used, depending largely upon the character of the scene to be produced. The company would also buy supplies and material for costumes here and would be conducting a business of many kinds, such as rigging, horses and such things from the business men of El Paso. Besides the value of getting El Paso scenes into the films, the location of the company here would mean a big steady income for the city from various sources, all directly or indirectly to the operations of the company.

Will R. Winch, manager of the Vitagraph company, has interested himself in attempting to get the company to locate here and is showing Mr. Dorris around El Paso and through the valley to convince him that El Paso can furnish scenery for any sort of setting desired, except ocean, colonial homes, bungalows, New England homes, English homes, well paved business and residential streets, country roads, groves and forests of underbrush along the river, the river itself, the smelter, ridges, viaducts, tunnels, a military fort, good country roads, country homes of various types, Mexican homes, both city and rural, farm and irrigation scenery, Indian, mountain, caves, desert, plain, cañon, irrigation ditches, orchards, vineyards, a mine, a sawmill, a race course, automobiles of every description, handsome interiors in clubs, hotels and residences, in fact practically any scene that the artist would require is easily had in El Paso or within five miles of the town. Then there is the fact that the company has been in El Paso and through the valley to convince him that El Paso can furnish scenery for any sort of setting desired, except ocean, colonial homes, bungalows, New England homes, English homes, well paved business and residential streets, country roads, groves and forests of underbrush along the river, the river itself, the smelter, ridges, viaducts, tunnels, a military fort, good country roads, country homes of various types, Mexican homes, both city and rural, farm and irrigation scenery, Indian, mountain, caves, desert, plain, cañon, irrigation ditches, orchards, vineyards, a mine, a sawmill, a race course, automobiles of every description, handsome interiors in clubs, hotels and residences, in fact practically any scene that the artist would require is easily had in El Paso or within five miles of the town.
